Roger O'Shaughnessy

The glass industry recognizes Roger O'Shaughnessy for his active involvement in making Cardinal IG Company the first producer of LoE coated glass for residential use on a mass production scale.

As Cardinal IG Company's President since 1967, O'Shaughnessy played an integral part in expanding the company with its first float glass facility in Menomonie, Wisconsin, which opened in 1992.

Today, Cardinal has eighteen glass manufacturing and fabricating facilities throughout the United States with 4,000 employees. Cardinal's four coating facilities have produced more than 400 million square feet of coated glass since initiating these products in 1984.

Though raised in South Dakota, Mr. O'Shaughnessy attended the University of Minnesota, and began working for Cardinal in 1963. At this early point of his career, Mr. O'Shaughnessy was active in trade association and ASTM Standards work.

In 1987, Mr. O'Shaughnessy and his management group bought the M.L. Gordon Family Trust shares of Cardinal IG Company. The company remains privately owned today.
